

Manager KPIs

1. Leadership

- The manager should have a vision. The manager must lead the team with clarity and direction. Comfort zones are fine, but growth comes from pushing the team a little further every day.
- Lead the TTH meetings confidently and ensure the intro, structure and case direction are finalised during the discussion.
- The team should feel guided, supported, and aligned at all times.

2. Team Management

- It is the manager's responsibility to ensure the target of the team members is completed and the work is distributed fairly. No team member should be overworked or underutilised and most importantly should not miss the targets.
- The manager must keep track of workload, output, and deadlines. (Track through your dashboards)
- If any disputes or friction arise within the team, the manager should resolve them quickly and maintain a healthy work environment.

3. ClickUp Usage

- ClickUp is mandatory and all the communication should be on clickup.
- The tasks on boards and dashboards should be updated well on time.
- The manager has to ensure if his/her team members are using clickup efficiently and properly

4. Quality Control

- The manager must ensure scripts and edits meet the company's quality standard.
- Case direction, storytelling, visuals, and compliance should be checked properly before sending the work ahead.
- Quality issues should reduce with time as the team becomes more skilled.
- Case Ratings should be justified and ensured by the manager
- Manager has to ensure that the quality score is given to their team members

5. Timely Deliveries

- The manager is responsible for making sure deadlines are met without last-minute chaos.
- Planning, follow-ups, and weekly tracking should be done to avoid delays.

- A smooth, predictable workflow is expected.

6. 1:1 Connect

The manager should have a monthly 1:1 with every team member to understand:

- where they are improving,
- where they are struggling, and
- what support they need.
This is essential to identify issues early and ensure every team member grows consistently.

7. Learning, Coaching & Knowledge Sharing

- The manager should try to learn something new, as learning is a continuous process and share his learnings and experiences about storytelling, visuals, editing, workflow, or compliance with their team. This can be through an email, a short session, or a discussion.
- The manager should also create opportunities to bring new ideas, improve productivity, and keep the team motivated. A learning mindset should be encouraged at all times.

8. Communication & Feedback

- The manager should communicate clearly—both upward and downward.
- Feedback to team members must be specific, timely, and solution-oriented.
- Communication with leadership should be crisp, structured, and data-backed.

9. Ownership & Professional Conduct

- The manager must take ownership of their team's performance, output, and behaviour. Should take initiatives, for example, taking up the interviews and taking workshops.
- Professional conduct, discipline, and positive team culture begin from the manager's own example.
- They should remain composed, proactive, and reliable in all situations.
